Birth Date: 1669⁴

Birth Memo: Family bible says he was aged 64 upon his death in 1733
Death Date: 10 Oct 1733, age: 64^{2,1}
Death Memo: Family bible shows death as 26 September, 1733
Father: Sir James Douglas 1st Baronet of Kelhead, 100797 (1639-<1708)
Mother: Catherine Douglas, 100773

Alexander Carlyle says of dining with Sir William in the summer of 1733 , with his father and Mr. Rob Jardine when Carlyle was 11 years of age ‘When he met us in the Stable Yard, I took him for a Grieve or Barn Man, for he wore a Blew Bonnet over his thin Gray Hairs and a Hoddan Grey Coat. But on a nearer view of him, he appear’d to be well Bred and Sensible, and was particularly Kind to my Father who I understood had been his Godson, having been Born in the neighbourhood on a Farm his Father Rented from Sir William.’⁵

Spouse: Helen Erskine^{3,2,1}, 100766
Birth Date: ca Feb 1683⁶
Birth Place: Stirling, Scotland
Chr Date: 1 Mar 1683, age: <1⁶

Chr Memo: The only Helen Erskine found born to a John Erskine and Jean Murray in Scotland in the right time period. This Helen was born in Stirling where it is known her father was based. The only other Helen Erskine in the right time period was baptised in Torryburn and her mother was called Helen.
Death Date: 26 Jul 1754, age: 71^{2,7}
Death Memo: 20 July 1754 according to the Scots Peerage but 26 July 1754 according to the record of her last will and testament.
Father: Colonel John Erskine of the Sandhaven, Culross, Fife, 25883 (1660-1733)
Mother: Jean Murray of Polmaise, 102198 (ca1663-?)

The sources relating to Helen Erskine are conflicting. However, it has now been confirmed, particularly through family wills, that she was the daughter of the Colonel John Erskine of the Alva family not the contemporaneous Colonel Jon Erskine of Carnock as stated in the Scots Peerage.

Scots Peerage (SP)-Helen Erskine is not referred to in Erskine, Lord Cardross entry but an unnamed daughter of Anna Dundas is. Referred to by name and parentage (father only, John Erskine of Carnock) in Queensberry entry (However, SP is incorrect in this instance).^{2,8}

Burke’s Landed Gentry 2001¹ states her father is ‘Col. John Erskine (brother of Sir Charles Erskine) of Alva, 1st Bt and Deputy Governor of Stirling Castle (See Rosslyn, E.)’. The First Baronet of Alva was, in fact, Sir Charles Erskine, in turn, son of Sir Charles Erskine of Alva. The second Sir Charles Erskine had a brother, John, who was a colonel. The Douglas family Bible also says that Helen was the daughter of Colonel John Erskine, second son of Sir Charles Erskine of Alva.

The 1741 will and associated document of 1744 of Colonel John Erskine, brother of Sir Charles Erskine of Alva, names his four living daughters including Dame Helen Erskine, wife of Sir William Douglas of Kelhead.⁹

Named as eldest daughter of the “deceast Colonel John Areskine” in a dispute over his will brought about by Helen’s half-sister, Mary in 1739.¹¹

Life with James Boswell:

Boswell met with her at Springkell, where he stayed from October 7 to October 13, 1762. He described her as an honest-hearted, merry, jocular girl, of size somewhat corpulent but has a very agreeable countenance and can walk and dance with all imaginable cleverness. She plays with taste upon the guitar, which she chiefly employs in accompanying her voice with a thorough-bas.. Indeed her singing is so excellent that I should wish to reward her with due praise in this my journal, but that I own is difficult to do.

Contested Dumfries Burgh unsuccessfully in the Queensberry interest in 1735; returned as a Tory for the county in 1741, he voted against the government. In January 1746, during the siege of the castle of Stirling, he arrived from London to see the Young Pretender with reports of messages sent to France by the English Jacobite leaders, Lord Barrymore and Sir William Watkins Wynn (q.q.v.) and with the news that the sum of 10,000 pounds was lying in the city of London for the Prince's use. This was disclosed by Murray of Broughton, the Young Pretender's secretary, who turned King's Evidence with the result that in August 1746, Sir John was sent to the Tower, the house being notified of his arrest for high treason. At a meeting of the Privy Council, 11. Nov., John Douglas, being then asked what he has to say to the facts above mentioned (Murray's evidence) he saith that he shall make no answer in any shape, that perhaps this may be ill manners, but that being no lawyer he doth not think fit to give any answer.'

Attempts to get corroborative evidence having failed, he was released in March 1748 on bail of 4000 pounds. Excepted by name from the subsequent Act of Indemnity, 20 Geo II, c. 52, he did not stand again.¹⁶

At the Privy Council hearing, in response to a question 'Do you know the witness?' (Murray of Broughton) 'Not I, I once knew a person who bore the designation of Murray of Broughton, but that was a gentleman and a man of honour, and one that could hold up his head.'¹⁷ Murray of Broughton was third cousin to Sir John Douglas of Kelhead, being descended from the first Earl of Queensberry. Sir John's grandson, Henry Alexander Douglas, married Elizabeth Dalzell, also a descendent of the first Earl of Queensberry through the Murrays of Broughton.

The Gentleman's Magazine Vol. XVI. of August 1746 has a short notice of Sir John's being 'brought to town in custody of a messenger'. The same page has entries on sums of money raised in London by a Dr. Barry sent to Newgate and the arrival of Lord Lovat at the Tower and seeing the scaffold upon which he would be executed being built. ¹⁸ An article in the Gentleman's Magazine of March 1848 notes Sir John's release on bail, 'his sureties in 2000 l and himself in 4000 l'.¹⁹

Sir John was the 'chief director of his friend the Duke of Queensberry's country affairs and parliamentary interest in the county of Dumfries but 'Sir John was no economist....he run aground and as he likewise had been nibbling to serve the Jacobite party...this added to the distraction and confusion of his affairs'....On Sir John's release in March, 1748 the Duke of Queensberry 'got his estate put under trustees...himself lent money....and had his creditors thereby pacified. ..By 1762, when James Boswell met him, the family were again in financial trouble by Sir John's extravagant 'improvements' which had 'burthened his estate with about 30,000 pounds'. He was imprisoned for debt in January 1778 and died in November of that year.¹⁶

Sir John wrote a very lengthy and impassioned letter to the Duke of Queensberry on 17 January 1775 apologising for letting him down but defending his situation and desperately seeking the Duke's support against his detractors. Si John seems to have been acting as a factor on the Estate and allowed arrears of rent to accumulate. He was also accused of obstructing the sale of woods, which he denied as an "injurious scandalous falsehood". Advances to his brother, David, are also mentioned.²⁰

Substantial holdings in Cummertrees and some other parts of Dumfriesshire are listed in a directory of Land Ownership circa 1770.¹⁴

Married to Christian Cunningham (1710-1741), daughter of Sir William Cunningham of Caprington. Father of William Douglas and about 7 other children.

Life with James Boswell:

Boswell visited the family at Kelhead on October 6 and 7, 1762. He wrote of Douglas that by his princely improvements [of the estate] Sir John Douglas has burthened his estate with about £30,000. [...] a lively man, but hurried away by fanciful project.

Birth Date: 1731
Birth Place: of, Kelhead, Dumfriesshire, Scotland
Death Date: 16 May 1783, age: 52
Educ: Glasgow University

Educated Glasgow University 1745-47; succeeded uncle Charles Douglas in Breconwhat Estate, Dumfries 13 Dec. 1770; and fa. 13 Nov 1778. Lt. Scots Brigade in Holland 1747-58; cornet a Drag. 1759-64.¹⁶

When there was no money left for William and his brothers' education, the family tutor, James Hogg, took his four pupils to Glasgow, supported them out of his own 'little patrimony' and sent the two eldest to university. This he continued when their father was in the Tower of London.

In June 1747, William obtained a commission in the regiment raised by Lord Drumlanrig and then, afterwards, served in the Scots Brigade; in about 1758, he received a commission in the 2nd Dragoons. At the end of the war, William apparently retired from the army and became a member of the Duke of Queensberry's household.

He went into Parliament in 1768. The Duke of Queensberry who died shortly before William's father, had long treated William as his eventual heir to the Marquessate of Queensberry, failing male issue by his immediate successor, Lord March.

Sir William's uncle, Sir Alexander Dick, recorded in his Memoranda:

'The Duke, shortly before his death, having a warm attachment to my nephew, Sir William, whom he sincerely loved from his proper behaviour to him while in Parliament, and considering that he had (children)... to provide for, he left him 16,000 pounds in money on their behalf...On the worthy Dukes's death...this new unkindly and ungenerous Duke refused to pay the money...My nephew seeks my approbation for suing the Duke in the court of session.'

At the general election of 1780, the Duke refused to return him to Parliament. William's action before the court of session for 20,000 pounds (16,000 pounds plus interest) was successful; on 30 April, 1783, Queensberry's appeal was dismissed by the Lords. Sir William was so overjoyed by the news that he had an apoplectic fit while playing with his children, and died on 16 May 1783.¹⁶

Biography

William Douglas. (Ca. 1730-1784) (aka. 4th Bart of Kelhead) 4th Bart of Kelhead. Son of Sir John Douglas, 3rd of Kelhead (and son of Boswell's mother's half-sister Helen Erskine) and Christian Cunninghame (1710-1741). Married Grace Johnstone (d. 1836) in 1772. A Captain in 1762. His sons Charles and John later became 6th and 7th Marquesses of Queensberry, respectively. He was also a sometime Member of Parliament.

Life with James Boswell:

Boswell possibly was in William Douglas' company on October 6, 1762, when he visited Douglas' family at Kelhead. Boswell mentions a Mr. Douglas, son to Sir John, an officer in the Greys, an amiable young fellow whom I hope to see in the circumstances which he deserves. However, Sir John did have two other surviving sons, at least one of whom was in the army. Also, I rather doubt if Boswell would refer to a 32 year old as a young fellow.

JB also dined with Douglas and Captain Maxwell on 20/12-62.

Although the country house market in Scotland presents a varied picture, this applies only to "conventional" properties and their buyers; people who, whatever their station in life, still have to commute regularly to work to earn a daily crust.

”Sale of Kinmount in 1999.

The super-rich buyer of country mansions goes purely for the standard and setting of the property and if location is important to him, then it is often a case of the more secluded the better.

The five most expensive Scottish properties sold last year by Savills were all purchased by buyers who were based outside Scotland. One of these was Kinmount House, home of the athlete, Steve Ovett, which, after being on the market for a long period, suddenly sold towards the end of last year for considerably more than the upset price of 1.3m. Kinmount House is situated in Dumfries-shire, where more conventional country housing proving extremely difficult to shift. So the moral seems to be: if do you chose a house in slow-to-sell location then make sure it's a good one.”²⁴

Entry in IGI for Grissel Johnstone is the only likely one for a Grace Johnstone born to William Johnstone in the right period. No mother is given. Christening date is given as 1 December 1746. This has been verified by Imchad Research. Baptismal entry in OPR states “Dec. 1st (1746) William Johnstone, Younger of Lockerbie, had a child born and baptised by the name of Grissel”. ‘Grissel’ was almost always changed to ‘Grace’ by the late 1700s.²⁹

However, according to her death notice (30 March 1836), Grace was born circa 1843. She must have been christened at the age of three. 'Deaths: On Friday, the 25 inst., at Glen Stuart, Lady Douglas Johnstone (sic) of Lockerby, relict of the late Sir William Douglas of Kinmount, Bart., in her 93rd year'²⁸

See Internet site for 'Lockerbie Manor' now a hotel said to have been the home of 'Dame Grace Douglas' and her husband, Sir William, but it was built in the early 1800's after he died.

See also the Post Office Annual Directory for entries in 1827, 1828 and 1829 for Lady Grace Douglas, Heriot Row, No. 24, Edinburgh; also in Pigot's Directory for 1825-26. This may or may not be the same Lady Grace.³⁰

Lockerbie 'derives both its origins and its name from an ancient castle situated on a hill between two lakes, and which was the baronial residence of the family of Johnstone of Lochwood, ancestors of the present Marquess of Queensberry. The small hamlet that arose round the castle gradually increased under the liberal patronage of its proprietors, who granted lands for buildings upon long and favourable leases.....Fairs for lambs and wool, which are largely resorted to by persons from many miles' distance are held at Lammas and Michaelmas.....and so much has the business of late years increased, that the whole of that hill, the superiority of which was purchased from the corporation of Glasgow by Lady Douglas, of Lockerbie House, is now appropriated for that purpose.'³¹

Notice in the Dumfries Weekly Journal of 10 August, 1802 says 'Lady Douglas of Kellhead intends to preserve the GAME on her estate of Lockerbie and all persons who shall shoot or hunt thereon without her written authority, shall be prosecuted in terms of the laws of the country.'³²

Grace was served heir to her father on 22 May 1783-recorded on 19 June 1783 (monthly no. 6. Referred to as Douglas-Grace, Dame (or Johnston).³³

Ian McClumpha of Imchad research found a book by Thomas Henderson entitled 'Lockerbie: A Narrative of Village Life in Days Gone By' published in 1937. It is dedicated 'To the memory of the family of Johnstone-Douglas of Lockerbie. Who, during successive generations, by their generosity and care for the welfare of others, did so much to alleviate the circumstances and brighten the lives of many who dwelt upon thier estates'. The book is 242 pages long and is a series of recollections of an old resident, brought out by the author, a Lockerbie solicitor. Grace and her sister, Susan, are both mentioned.

Lieutenant-general and colonel of 99th regiment of foot; was at the Battle of Dettingen in 1743. Died unmarried. Clive Douglas states “90th Regiment of Foot”.³⁶

A Colonel Stewart Douglas of Hurkledale was a substantial landholder in the parish of Cummertrees, Dumfriesshire, circa 1770.¹⁴

On 12 November 1779, Stewart Douglas wrote a most bitter letter to his nephew, Sir William Douglas of Kelhead, regarding the proposed sale of the lands and contents of Hurkledale and Todholes to cover debts. The letter was addressed from St. Mary Le Bone. He questions "whether it is necessary in discharge of your debts to Strip me Naked or not; but then perhaps it may be necessary for you, or Some of my most active persecutors, to get something into Pocket for the Wages of their Sins" There is much more in this vein over some five pages. Stewart Douglas also provides an attachment outlining that the value of Hurkledale is sufficient to cover debts. He also accuses Sir William of even wanting to sell his uncle's breeches. ³⁹

On 4 September, 1779, Stewart Douglas wrote a letter to the Duke of Queensberry (not named but evident from the contents regarding a promise he stated the previous Duke had made regarding the security of the Estate of Kelhead)) regarding a request to raise a regiment.⁴⁰

Birth Date: 4 Nov 1751¹⁰
Death Date: ?

The family bible (difficult to read) also has a child with a name that looks like Helen born on 29 October, 1757. This is the birth date of John Erskine Douglas but his name is not in the family bible. The bible names Janet M Douglas as 8th daughter and Stewart Douglas as 7th son. The couple had fifteen children. The Bible has fifteen entries. On this basis, I am assuming that the Helen born on 4 November, 1751 lived and the entry on 29 October, 1757 was for John Erskine Douglas.¹⁰

DOUGLAS, Miss - D6/4/1853 - On the 6th instant, at 24 Chester Street, Belgrave Square, London, Miss Douglas, only surviving daughter of Admiral John Erskine Douglas, aged 87 years.⁵¹

The above cannot refer to one of the Admiral's daughters. Given the age, she would have been the last surviving sister of the Admiral. See record for Jean (Jane) who died in 1853 and who would have been 87.

The Times of London on 11 April 1853 provides the same details except that it describes her as the Admiral's sister not daughter.

DOUGLAS, Miss - D6/4/1853 - On the 6th instant, at 24 Chester Street, Belgrave Square, London, Miss Douglas, only surviving daughter of Admiral John Erskine Douglas, aged 87 years.

The London Times entry of 11 April 1853 has the same details but refers to her as the Admiral's last surviving sister. This would be correct not the former entry.

(3) 1.10.13 Frances 'Fanny' Douglas^{10,35}, 102309

(3) 1.10.14 Janet M 'Jane?' Douglas^{10,48,35}, 103101

Birth Date: ? 9 Apr 1771¹⁰
Death Date: ?⁴⁸

The Douglas Family Bible has a possible Janet, a Jean and this Janet. Lodge's Peerage and Burke's Peerage names one 'Jane'. Lodge's does not give a date of birth but Burke's 1881 gives a date of death as 1853⁴⁸. However, according to the Wigtownshire Free Press, the daughter who died in 1853 was 87. ⁵¹ This fits with the birth date of Jean (Jane) in 1766.

It is assumed but not proven that this is the youngest Jean, Janet, Jane in the family.

Alumni Cantabrigienses was compiled by John and J.A. Venn, former presidents of Gonville and Caius and Queens' Colleges respectively. This list of all known students, graduates, and officers at the University of Cambridge offers information from various sources besides the university's records, which date from around 1261. The entire collection contains 10 volumes in 2 sets. The first set covers alumni from the earliest records to 1752 and the second set from 1752 to 1900. The compilation was completed in 1956.
